Course Overview:

It goes beyond doubt that the absence of adequate and effective communication can invariably impair the impact of research on policy development and public participation. Engagement with research findings by a range of audiences at various levels — local, national, and global — can ensure quality policies and quality life. Promoting such engagement requires effective research communication. It is much more than just the mere dissemination of research results. It draws in from a complex of participants and beneficiaries including researchers, journalists, editors, and various intermediaries, in order to form an interdependent system of the communication matrix.

The proposed Short-Term Course (STC) has been designed to play a vital transformational role in embarking on a culture of research communication in India, and the bridging of the gap between research dissemination and policy framework.
